

The Wikileaks Revelations:

In the first of what will likely be many podcasts discussing some of the latest China-related revelations contained in the recent Wikileaks data-dump, our discussion today turns towards North Korea, and Chinese diplomatic overtures suggesting that the country's long-standing ally may be prepared to desert it, accepting a unified Korean peninsula under the control of South Korea.

Sorting through the issues with Kaiser this week are special guests Jeremy Goldkorn of Danwei fame, along with Gady Epstein, Beijing bureau chief for Forbes magazine. Also joining us for the first time is Mary Kay Magistad, long-time Northeast Asia correspondent for Public Radio International, and occasional correspondent for National Public Radio, The Washington Post, and the Christian Science Monitor.

If you have any questions or comments, please leave a comment in our discussion section below, or write Kaiser directly at sinica@popupchinese.com. And of course, if you want to be notified automatically whenever a new episode of Sinica is released, we encourage you to create an account on Popup Chinese and follow the instructions for subscribing to the Sinica podcast. You can also download this show as a standalone mp3 file. Enjoy!